

MIDWEST ANTIQUES AND COLLECTIBLES

Destination Drive, approximately 50 miles round trip. Open daily.

This is a destination drive for those (maybe the wives?) who like antique shopping!

English, IN was originally called Hartford, and under the latter name was laid out in 1839. When the town incorporated in 1886 it was renamed English for William Hayden English, an Indiana politician of the day. On December 28, 1893, the county seat of Crawford County was relocated from Leavenworth to English.

From 1959 to 1990, English suffered six floods. The town council decided that the only solution to the flooding problem was to move the town. 160 acres (0.65 km²) of high ground were purchased, a partnership was formed with Lincoln Hills Development Corporation, and the entire town was relocated. This was the second-largest relocation of an entire town in U.S. history.

Midwest Antiques and Collectables is a very unique shop. They have hard to find and very unusual antiques that you can't just find at any shop. They also have a large selection of Mexican Imports such as metal yard art, clay pots in a variety of sizes, gazebos, arbors etc. If you can't find something here, chances are you won't find it anywhere. It's a great place to just browse around as well. They have over 2 acres of merchandise. Two large buildings full of antiques plus several small outbuildings full. They have refinished antique furniture and rough furniture as well. The larger items may not fit so well in a Porsche, but they will ship it to you!
